easyChat

easyCamera gives the device user the ability to take pictures using their device, it is accompanied by some pre-stored phrases such as “Stand still”. easyAlbum then gives the ability to view these pictures easily.

easyPhone has built in phone commands for phone to pair to device, Samsung smart phones pair successfully and the device is programmed to activate Siri on iPhones too.

The easycomputer commands within easyChat are phenomenal, from social media such as Facebook and Whatsapp to Microsoft Word, Kindle and emails – easyChat has it all programmed in.

Also allows for someone to use their device to control an external computer using a Bluetooth dongle.

easyPlayer gives quick access to some music controls giving the device user the ability to control what they are listening to.

easyMessage allows someone to store the message in their speech display bar into a cell in the page.

Nueye

Nueye is the name given to our eyegaze system used on our Accent devices.

Here are some of the tools we use with Nueye

Eyegaze positioning

Our positioning indicator gives accurate live feedback using a 'spirit level' style display. Having the ability to do a calibration up to 9 points but with as little as 0.

Calibration dot

When calibrating we like to use a circle with a smaller circle inside it – this is to draw that persons attention to the centre. If using a picture of a family member the user may be drawn to look at the outside edge of the picture which could result in a less successful calibration.

Calibration feedback

When calibrating you can turn on a ‘validation’ of that calibration which will produce a report to provide details of accuracy. If the calibration is a good one it can then be saved and there would be no further need to calibrate the same user.

DevX: 0.34
DevY: 0.68

Accuracy Data (Right)
DevX: 0.25
DevY: 0.54

OK

Nupoint

Nupoint is the name given to our head tracking unit.

Nupoint uses an optical sensor to track a small reflective dot on the user's forehead, glasses, or other convenient spot. It converts the natural movement of the user's head to accurately control the pointer on the screen. Key selection is activated by dwelling over the desired key.

Nupoint is cheaper than most eyegaze systems, doesn't need to be calibrated and has more flexibility with positioning.

Gone are the days of pointing a remote at a device to program one IR remote button at a time! Our new Accent range have a blaster chip that has pre-stored IR signals meaning a page can be auto populated by typing in the manufacture's name.

It means the device is ready to use to control the TV, Toy, DVD player or whatever IR item you might be programming straight out of the box.
